Carson High Undergoes Last-Minute Finishing

CARSON — Construction of the new $5 million Carson High School will be completed in time for a predicted February occupancy, Los Angeles school officials have disclosed.

The 3000-student capacity facility at 23rd and Main Streets rises on a 27-acre site and will relieve present crowding at Banning, Narbonne and Gardena High Schools.

Provisions have been made in the school plant's design to accommodate enough portable classrooms to house students at the school's enrollment high.

This is in keeping with Los Angeles schools' policy of building all new school plants on a 80-20 ratio, with 80 per cent of the total classrooms needed being of the permanent type and 20 per cent being portable classrooms which can be transported from school site to school site to take care of enrollment fluctuations, officials say.

Buildings on the Carson High School site are of two-story, pre-stressed concrete construction. Classrooms have been built "back-to-back" with outside open-air corridors included on both levels. All buildings are connected by covered arcades.

The combination physical education building contains facilities for both girls' and boys' physical education programs. The boys' side includes a regulation basketball-court-size playing floor with bleachers holding 1250 spectators, showers and locker rooms to accommodate 1400 boys, and offices and storage facilities.

Girls' quarters will include a large indoor area, shower and lockers for 1400 girls, a girls' physical education classroom, health education classroom, and offices and storage facilities.

Classrooms built in the new school include four for art, six for business education, 11 for English, one for journalism, six for foreign languages, four for home-making, six for mathematics, two for music, 10 for science, 11 for general use, and two for driver training. Special facilities will include an auto shop, two drafting classrooms, an electric shop, a light metal shop, a heavy metal shop, a print shop and a wood shop.

Also included are administrative offices, library and textbook room, a multi-purpose cafeteria with adjacent covered lunch area, a student store and a power plant.

Funds for construction of the new school came from the $153 million school bond issue which was approved by school system voters in June, 1960.

Master Plan Wins Approval

TORRANCE — A long-contested master plan for municipal Tract 2200 was approved unanimously by city councilmen Tuesday. There were no public protests.

The matter earlier met with strong opposition, but were resolved after a lengthy series of meetings before the Planning Commission.

The area is south of Sepulveda Blvd., north of Lomita Blvd., east of Madrona Ave. and West of Crenshaw Blvd. Zone changes authorized by the council will be from present M-2 manufacturing to R-1, R-3, M-1 and M-2.

Teen Center

(Continued from Page One) acceptance in locations tested, Sciarrotta said, and also has brought comments of interest from local officials.

Under the plan, "junk" autos would be repaired or modified in facilities provided by the city. Teen participants would receive instruction and practical experience in dismantling, repairing and rebuilding wheels, engines and other parts.

The facility and accompanying instruction would, Sciarrotta says, provide a "healthy and wholesome outlet" for teen-age enthusiasm and technical abilities.

A rent-free location would be sought for the facility, probably in an existing building. Stripped autos would be placed inside repair booths on both sides of the building, and a middle-aisle walkway would enable instructor and student workers to have access to divided work areas, spare parts bins and a tool crib.

In its initial stages, Sciarrotta says, the center could be scheduled two or three nights a week. Sustained interest would dictate expansion.

Day-to-day technical supervision and instruction would come from persons competent in the auto repair field, or from senior members of police-sponsored car clubs on a voluntary basis.

Sciarrotta says the plan will be brought before fellow councilmen in the near future for action.
